

FOXY TURNS OUT TO BE A TRANSGENDER
POLICEMAN
HORROR

His Honour Judge Thomas: I'm --

Mr Twomlow: Honour --

His Honour Judge Thomas: Afraid --

B

Mr Twomlow: Have --

His Honour Judge Thomas: I've looked it up in Blackstone's --

C

Mr Twomlow: Ah, right.

His Honour Judge Thomas: And in Blackstone's it's 8.42.

D

Mr Twomlow: Well, Your Honour, perhaps I can just have a moment to check the position in relation to what is, is on the tape. I think it's, is self-contained.

E

His Honour Judge Thomas: Yes. Can you do that quickly?

Mr Twomlow: Yes, I think so.

His Honour Judge Thomas: What do you say, Mr Kirk?

6

Mr Kirk: Well, it, it's of interest because the Foxy was a female if it's the tape that I was involved in on my own phone. Not only was it a female voice, but it didn't surprise me that the documentation that was served on me later indicated that it was female that was speaking to me. So the manner in which that tape has been presented to this trial, it's of no surprise to me by them producing a male and a tape, especially because late disclosure has happened at, yesterday, when the Imperial War Museum had notified the police a long time ago that the, the laws relating to the batch of machine guns are, are exempt, the '88 Act. The '88 Act, meaning that unless they're tampered with, oh, sorry, modified, do not require a stamp. Now this is all tied up with the interview with, that they must listen to, which I still haven't heard. I, I haven't heard, and that was when Mr Cooper gave evidence with the Nottinghamshire Police, and Mrs Cooper did, where it is, I, I understand from those that

H